This Week in Wabash

Hello, Wabash,

I hope your week is off to a great start. I'm looking at the weather forecast now, and it seems we may have a significant snowfall in our future this week. The National Weather Service is predicting a total of nearly a foot of snow between late Tuesday and early Thursday. I'll be working on a story for Wednesday's paper about it, so look for more then. For now, I would just advise your vehicle has plenty of gas and your fridge is full of food.

This I wanted to call your attention to a story we had on the front page of Saturday's paper: My interview with legendary rock singer Alice Cooper.

As I've said before, I love music and one of my favorite parts of working in Wabash is the proximity to the Honeywell Center. It's given me the opportunity to talk with and write about some of the most accomplished working musicians out there. They always have great stories to share and this was no exception.

Preparing to talk to Alice Cooper was also a lot of fun because it gave me an excuse to plow through his discography of albums. This is always interesting to me because you can really see the evolution of their styles, interests and abilities through the years. I had never explored his music all that deeply before now and it was a real treat to get to know the different phases of his career.

Alice Cooper is playing tonight at the Honeywell Center and if you're able to, I'd highly suggest checking out him and his band. It sounds like it will be great show.

In the meantime, if you haven't already, you really should check out his memorable cameo in the 1992 comedy film, "Wayne's World," You may even learn something about the history of Milwaukee in the process.

Well, that's all I have for you this week. Stay warm and dry and I'll talk to you again next week.

Best,
Rob
